

COURSE SCHEDULE SAMPLES (TIMES NEW ROMAN TEMPLATE)

Content in the schedule can be listed in a table or a series of lists. In either scenario, using a “Heading X” style for each week can be very helpful for students navigating with a screen reader or keyboard.

Below are some possible options.

Option 1 - Week by Week List

Note: The Heading 4 style for each week provides a navigation landmark for students navigating with a screen reader or keyboard. This option is best for viewing content on a mobile phone. It also allows flexibility when weeks have different events.

Module 1 (Heading 3 Style)

Week 1, June 1-June 5 (Heading 4 Style)

- Mon: Introduction to Course
- Wed: Policy and Guidelines - Read Penn State Policy A.D. 69, and federal guidelines (Readings in Canvas)
- Discussion Assignment: Have you or anyone you known ever had a temporary disability?

Week 2, June 8-June 12 (Heading 4 Style)

- Mon: Accessible Links - Read Accessible Link Text
- Wed: Headings and styles - Read Purpose of Headings
- Discussion Assignment: How do you think a typical student would benefit from these strategies?

Schedule Tables

This strategy splits a large schedule table into smaller units which can be confined to one page. Smaller tables are more accessible and usable by users on a screen reader or students with certain reading differences. Please also note the following:

- DO NOT MERGE TABLE CELLS - This type of cell is extremely difficult for users on a screen reader to process.
- If you use different background colors in the cell, please ensure that contrast guidelines are met. The default formatting in this document meets the guidelines.
- If you need a table which crosses a page, you need to repeat the first row on each page.

Option 2 - Week by Week Table Vertical

Splitting a large table into smaller chunks is helpful for many students, both sighted and unsighted. It is often easier to view and print.
